Assumptions that Informed our Planning Process:

- Public health concerns will drive many decisions in the coming year. We expect we will be shifting across different phases of operations as the year progresses, so maintaining some consistency across phases is important.
- It is impossible for the school to provide zero risk of contracting COVID-19 for our community members. During phases 1, 2, 3, and 4 - managed on-campus operations - parents may choose to have their student work from home instead of on campus based on many factors and especially any underlying health concerns for members of the family. The school will support distance learning for those students as needed.
- Griffin School will strive to maintain some level of in-person schooling as long as it is permitted with operations intended to manage the inherent health risks. In order to have an on-campus, in-person school experience, students, staff, and parents will need to be willing to modify their behavior and interactions and abide by protocols that are sometimes uncomfortable or awkward.

Factors determining movement between phases:

- Governmental agency directives
- Guidelines and recommendations from the CDC and the Austin-Travis County Health Authority
- Presence of COVID-19 within the Griffin community

Planning Areas In-Progress:

There are many elements that will be included in our planning process as we prepare to re-open campus. In all cases, we are following guidelines from the relevant governmental authorities, so our protocols (for example for how we will handle a situation in which a student or staff member contracts or is presumed to have contracted COVID-19) will be aligned with those orders and guidelines. The planning areas in progress include:

- Protocols for operations and communications when a student or staff member gets sick
- Design of classrooms and use of outdoor spaces
- Limiting and managing visitors
- Special cleaning protocols
- Managing lunch service
- Managing operations in sports and athletics programs
- Managing operations in theatre and music performance programs
- Class Trips - planned for spring semester on dates to be determined
